CAN YOU GUESS?

Here's a Chance to Make
Ten Dollars Easy.

All You Have to Do Is Pick the Winners In the Coming Primary.

Just for the interest attached to a guessing contest and to put a little more interest into the coming campaign for County officers, The News will give its readers a chance to make ten dollars and have a little fun at guessing on the side. To the person making the first nearest correct guess of the winners in the Democratic Primary Election which will be held in this county on Saturday, June 1st, 1901, The News will present a ten dollar gold piece. The conditions of the contest are simple. Old subscribers and new subscribers who pay $2 on their subscriptions will each be entitled to a guess, and to as many guesses as they pay year's subscription. If no one will be permitted to see how any one else has guessed. In guessing only the offices on the ballot are to be considered.

You intend to pay your subscription anyway, and you may as well pay before the first day of June and have a chance of getting your money back, besides gaining the distinction of knowing more about the political situation than your neighbors.

Each guess will be registered when received as to the exact day, hour and minute. No one will be permitted to see how any one else has guessed. In guessing only the offices on the ballot are to be considered.

Fears He Killed Gen. Jackson

Frank S. Rosenthal, a rich, hide and wool dealer of Carrollton, Mo., has been haunted ever since the Civil War by the thought that he was probably the man that fired the shot at Chancellorville which killed Gen. "Stonewall" Jackson, and he declares he would give his entire fortune to be certain that it was not his bullet that caused the death of the great Confederate commander. Mr. Rosenthal served throughout the war with the Louisiana Tigers, one of the most noted regiments in the old Stonewall brigade, and he and S. Solomon, of Macou, Ga., are the sole survivors of the picket guard which fired on Gen. Jackson that fatal night.

In telling the story of his part in the terrible tragedy which deprived the Confederate army of its great military genius, Mr. Rosenthal says that he and twenty other members of the Louisiana Tigers were sent out on the picket line with instructions from Gen. Jackson himself to let nobody through, counter-attack or no counter-attack. Previous to this order the countersign, "I don't know," had been agreed on and was communicated to the staffs and guard details. The pickets had not been on duty very long before they saw a body of men riding along the lines. The challenge was given and the reply, "I don't know," rang out. Then the horsemen started through the lines and nine of the guards, according to instructions, sent a volley after them. Three bullets went true to their mark and Gen. Jackson received the wound which caused his death.

Although only fifty-eight years old, Mr. Rosenthal stoops as he walks and complains of constant pain. He declares, however, that it is not the weight of Yankee lead that has been carrying around with him that makes him appear prematurely old, but that it is the thought of that terrible night which has preyed on his mind ever since his youth.

The Rambler

Count Boni de Castellane, who is known in this country as the man who married Jay Gould's daughter, slipped an editor in Paris the other day. Boni seems to be a fighter, and, without regard to French pronunciation, is the Boni-partie of today.

Be it understood that it was not a Paris, Ky., editor who was slapped. If it had been, by this time Boni wouldn't have any use for his wife's millions.

One Samuel Empty, of Illinois, went home the other night and proceeded to reduce the furniture of his dwelling to kindling wood, but was halted in his mad career by the appearance of the police. Empty was evidently full.—Lexington Herald.

"It must have been easier to turn to tively, as he picked her up off of the ice for the eighth time.

"Why?" he asked.

"They were bustles in those days," and she sighed as though she were suffering.

Mack Brooks took a trip to Cincinnati last week, and met with an experience from which he has not yet fully recovered. He was seated in a Fourth street cable car, when the car turned suddenly into Central Avenue, and as it swung suddenly round the corner a pretty girl who had been dangling to a strap for several minutes lost her hold and landed gracefully upon Mack's lap.

"I beg your pardon," she said, her cheeks taking on a rose-colored tint.

"Keep your seat," replied Mack; "the pleasure is mine."

Report of Louisville tobacco market: Total sales for the week were 4,473 hogsheads, of which 3,294 were of the 1900 crop. Owing to the cold weather the receipts and sales have been much smaller than usual at this season of the year. Tobacco is being sold as fast as it comes in, as there are no stocks. Prices have been very satisfactory and continue 50 cents and higher on all grades. Cigarette tobacco is very scarce and in great demand. The highest price of the season was reached for a hogshead of this type on Thursday, when $17.75 was paid by the American Tobacco Company. Good red manufacturing kinds are strong; red tips are also very strong. The market is in a very clean, healthy condition.

WHILE HE WAITED.

The clock upon the mantel stand;
It ticked, and so I knew it was going.
But as to speed its gilded hands
Don't make a very rapid showing.

My lady's maid an age ago—
Said you would be down in a second;
I'd give a ride just to know
Exactly how her time is reckoned!

The thing is pretty of its kind;
Two chubby loves support its dial.
One loves the thing as I do, I find,
Supports me in this present trial.

Perhaps by her fair hand 'tis wound;
I wonder this the while I linger.
My lady can—that, too, I've found—
Wind me around her little finger.

She knows it, too; I'll bet a dime
Her purpose is to keep me guessing.
It seems I'm only marking time,
Whereas I thought I was progressing.

Time! That is why this clock is set—
To mind us of the moments fleeting,
But time completely I forget
From the sweet moment of our meeting.

Tick, tick, the tiny pendulum;
Click, click, her foot beats, oak and leather;
Thump, thump my heart! I know she's come—
All three now keeping time together.

—Chicago Record.

A Cure For Loneliness

BY W. R. ROSE

The air was mild and clear. The children frolicked merrily among the trees in the park. The white capped nurses sat on the rustic seats here and there and watched their charges or played with the smaller children who nestled in wicker carriages with gay colored canopies.

On one of the benches not far from the entrance sat an elderly man. He was straight and square shouldered, with a white mustache and grizzled hair and a strong suggestion of early military training. He sat there because he liked to see the children at play. They were better company than his thoughts. Anyway, he had little else to do.

On this particular day he had watched the playful elves as they darted in and out among the trees until he had grown tired. The warm sun made him sleepy. His gray head slowly dropped back, his shoulders found a restful corner of the high backed seat, and presently he was soundly sleeping.

A slight concussion awakened him. He opened his eyes with a little start. The sun was peeping through the foliage, and the rays dazzled him. He tried to raise a hand to draw his soft hat over his eyes and could not. Both hands were pinioned fast. He looked down. A rope was encircling his body and holding his arms fast to his sides. He made an effort to release himself, but without success. He fancied he could sympathize with the feelings of Gulliver when he learned the pygmies had caught and bound him.

Whom he had watched so many times among the trees. He was right. A child's laughter broke on his ears. His captor was close behind him. "Aha," he said in what was intended for a very gruff voice, "are you there? Unhand me at once or tremble for the consequences!"

The cord—it was a child's skipping rope—was rapidly drawn from about his waist and a moment later its owner danced in front of him.

She was a little girl of possibly 7, though at times her varying expressions made her seem much older. Her hair floated about her head in careless waves and tendrils, her eyes were gray and deep, her mouth was small and beautifully shaped, and there was a saucy upward tilt to her short nose.

"Pooh, pooh," she said, with a mocking courtesy, "I ain't a bit afraid of you!"

"And why not?" the old man asked. She was a charming fairy, a natural little coquette, and her every move was full of a subtle grace. "And why are you not afraid of such a gray old mustache as I am?" he asked again as she prouetted before him.

"Because you are my grandfather," she earnestly answered.

The old man's face darkened. "What do you mean by that nonsense?" he harshly asked.

"Tain't nonsense," said the little maiden, "unless grandfathers is nonsense. Anyway, you're my grandfather." And she started to leave him.

"Tain't," he cried. "Come here. What did you mean by saying I am your grandfather? Do you call every old man you see grandfather?"

"No," said the child. "Only you."

He studied her face sharply. "Come a little closer," he said in coaxing tones. She marched boldly up to him. Her little hand flew up and touched the front of her cap.

"That's the way to salute a soldier," she said, with a merry laugh. "Mamma said you was one."

He caught his breath. "Perhaps," he slowly said, "you can even tell me my name?"

"Yes, I can," replied the child. "It's easy. Your name is Phillip. An now guess what mine is."

"Is it Mary?" he gently asked.

"No," laughed the child. "That's mamma's. Mine is most like yours. It's Philippa."

The old man was silent for a moment. "Is your mother here, child?" he suddenly asked. "Is she lurking about among the trees?"

"Who? Do you mean mamma?" cried the child. "She isn't here. She hasn't time for trees. She's always too busy. Didn't you know she paints? Yes, she paints lovely little pictures. Minniehoors she calls them. They're pictures of people, don't you know, only much prettier. But sometimes people don't pay very quick, an sometimes they talk mamma change too much, an sometimes she doesn't have any pictures to do. Then, you know, it's pretty hard to have the landlord call. I guess you know how that is."

"And where is your father?" and the old man's voice suddenly grew hard.

"He's dead in California," said the child. "He was an actor, you know; a stage actor. I don't member him very well. I was too little when he went away. I've tried to act, too, but Della, that's the janitor's wife, she says I can't act for shucks."

"Good thing," muttered the old man.

"Well, I don't know," said the child. "You see, I wanted to do something to help mamma, an if I can't act I don't know what I can do. But I s'pose it's no use. Della said that as a child wonder if I was the wust she ever seen, an Della goes out a good deal."

A faint smile crossed the old man's stern features.

"And what made you think that I am your grandfather?" he asked.

"Oh, Marie Kramer told me," replied the child. "She knows everybody. She's lived out more places. She's Bessie Leighton's nurse now, an just as soon as she saw you sittin here one day she said, 'There's old Colonel Robson.' She knew you 'cause you used to go to the Bronsons, where she was drivin them. An pretty soon she looked at me an said, 'Why, he's your grandfather, ain't he?' An I said I didn't know, an she thought it out an said, 'Yes, he is, 'cause your mamma is his daughter, an she ran away with a play actor, an the old hunkers shut his door on her forever.' That's what Marie said. An when I went home I said to Della, 'My grandfather's sittin over there in the park, an he's the loneliest lookin thing.' An Della says: 'If he's settin in the park, he's either a tramp or a millionaire. If he's a tramp, you must keep away from him, but if he's a millionaire you want to rope him in.' An when I looked at you again I saw you didn't look like a tramp, an so I thought I'd take my chances an rope you in, an that's just what I did."

"And your mother knows nothing about my being here?" the old man asked.

"Yes, she does," replied the child. "I told her, an she looked so queer, an her face got red, an she said: 'Phillipa, dear, it may not be your grandfather. But anyway, you mustn't speak to him unless he speaks to you first.' An I made you speak to me first, didn't I?"

The old man leaned back and looked at the child.

"Phillipa," he said slowly, "how would you like to come and live with me? You would have your own beautiful room, and all the playthings you could want, and somebody to wait on you, and a pony to drive, and everything that could make a little girl happy."

"An would mamma come, too?" the child asked.

The old man shook his head.

"I'd like the room," said the child, "an the pony, an all the rest, but I guess I'd be too lonesome without mamma."

"We'd be just two lonesome ones together," said the child. Then she added, "If you knew mamma, you'd see how it is."

"Perhaps I am beginning to see," said the old man softly.

"I'll tell you what we'll do," cried the child. "You can borrow me. How's that?"

"It sounds well," said the old man. "How much I set about it?"

"Oh, it's easy," replied the child. "You just come to our flat an send up your card, an then mamma will whistle down an say, 'Please come up.' Then you go up, an I'm there, an I say, 'My Grandpapa, this is mamma.' Then you bow an say, 'Pleased to know you,' an mamma says, 'Where have I seen you before?' an then you say, 'Can I borrow your charmin daughter for the rest of the day?' for you've come very early in the mornin, you know, an mamma says, 'Have you any duty for the rent—I mean for the child?' an you say, 'Oh, yes; indeed I have,' an then you put up a silver quarter for security an take me, an we go away somewhere an have a splendid time together an get home when it's real dark, an mamma is gettin fidgety. I'd like to see that house of yours an that room an those ponies. We ought to get better acquainted—we ought to, really."

The old man smiled at her enthusiasm. Evidently this was a delightfully original child.

"Do you think your mamma would paint my portrait?" he asked.

"She'd be real pleased to," said the child. "An I'd get the commission, too, wouldn't I? She told me if I got any orders I'd get the commission. You're my order, ain't you?"

"Yes," said the old man as he slowly arose. "Come, we will go and seek your mother. I must get that picture before I grow any older—and before your mamma's memory quite outgrows the reminiscences of her childhood. Come, Philippa."

And in hand they passed down the gravelled walk and through the big gates and presently found themselves in front of the huge apartment house that the lonesome Philippa called home.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Fears He Killed Gen. Jackson.

Frank S. Rosenthal, a rich, hide and wool dealer of Carrollton, Mo., has been haunted ever since the Civil War by the thought that he was probably the man that fired the shot at Chancellorsville which killed Gen. "Stonewall" Jackson, and he declares he would give his entire fortune to be certain that it was not his bullet that caused the death of the great Confederate commander. Mr. Rosenthal served throughout the war with the Louisiana Tigers, one of the most noted regiments in the old Stonewall brigade, and he and S. Solomon, of Macon, Ga., are the sole survivors of the picket guard which fired on Gen. Jackson that fatal night.

In telling the story of his part in the terrible tragedy which deprived the Confederate army of its great military genius, Mr. Rosenthal says that he and twenty other members of the Louisiana Tigers were sent out on the picket line with instructions from Gen. Jackson himself to let nobody through, counter-signal or no counter-signal. Previous to this order the countersign, "I don't know," had been agreed on and was communicated to the staffs and guard details. The pickets had not been on duty very long before they saw a body of men riding along the line. This challenge was given and the reply, "I don't know," rang out. Then the horsemen started through the lines and nine of the guards, according to instructions, sent a volley after them. Three bullets went true to their mark and Gen. Jackson received the wound which caused his death.

Although only fifty-eight years old, Mr. Rosenthal stoops as he walks and complains of constant pain. He declares, however, that it is not the weight of Yankee lead that he has been carrying around with him that makes him appear prematurely old, but that it is the thought of that terrible night which has preyed on his mind ever since his youth.

The Rambler

Count Boni de Castellane, who is known in this country as the man who married J. G. Gould's daughter, slumped an editor in Paris the other day. Boni seems to be a fighter, and, without regard to French pronunciation, is the Boni-part of to-day.

Be it understood that it was not a Paris, Ky., editor who was slapped. If it had been, by this time Boni wouldn't have any use for his wife's millions.

One Samuel Empty, of Illinois, went home the other night and proceeded to reduce the furniture of his dwelling to kindling wood, but was halted in his mad career by the appearance of the police. Empty was evidently full.—Lexington Herald.

"It must have been easier to jump to five, as he picked her up off of the ice for the eighth time.
"Why?" he asked.
"They were bustles in those days," and she sighed as though she were suffering.

Mack Brooks took a trip to Cincinnati last week, and met with an experience from which he has not yet fully recovered. He was seated in a Fourth street cable car, when the car turned suddenly into Central Avenue, and as it swung suddenly round the corner a pretty girl who has been dangling to a strap for several minutes lost her hold and landed gracefully upon Mack's lap.

"I beg your pardon," she said, her cheeks taking on a rose-colored tint.
"Keep your seat," replied Mack; "the pleasure is mine."
Report of Louisville tobacco market: Total sales for the week were 4,473 hogheads, of which 3,394 were of the 1900 crop. Owing to the cold weather the receipts and sales have been much smaller than usual at this season of the year. Tobacco is being sold as fast as it comes in, as there are no stocks. Prices have been very satisfactory and continue 50 cents to $1 higher on all grades. Cigarette tobacco is very scarce and in great demand. The highest price of the season was reached for a hoghead of this type on Thursday, when $17.75 was paid by the American Tobacco Company. Good red manufacturing kinds are strong; red tips are also very strong. The market is in a very clean, healthy condition.

Notice.

To Policy Holders in Old Line Companies: Beware of the confidence game played by the pious Insurance Agent, who wants to do you the favor of switching you from your company to his. All companies write numerous plans of insurance and every plan costs a different price. You get value received for any plan you buy, from any Old Line Company. When the confidence man shows you a plan differing from the one you have, which is part of the game, and should you prefer this particular plan write to the Agent or Company who insured you and get it, and thereby save what you paid. Don't be an easy mark. There are millions of dollars lost each year by policy holders being duped by confidence men.

WHILE HE WAITED.

The clock upon the mantel stands;
It ticks, and so I know it's going.
But as to speed its gilded hands,
That makes a very rapid showing.
My lady's maid an age ago—
Said she would be down in a second;
I'd give a trifle just to know
Exactly how her time is reckoned.
The thing is pretty of its kind;
My lady said that, too, I've found—
One love, a strong one, though, I find,
Supports me in this present trial.
Perhaps by her fair hand 'tis wound;
I wonder this the while I linger.
My lady said—that, too, I've found—
Wind me—around her little finger.
She knows it, too; I'll bet a dime
Her purpose is to keep me guessing.
It seems I'm only marking time,
Whilst I thought I was progressing.
Time! That is why this clock is set—
To mind us of the moments fleeting,
But time completely I forget
From the sweet moment of our meeting.
Tick, tick, the tiny pendulum;
Click, click, her bosom's soft and leathery;
Thump, thump, my heart! I know she'd come—
All three now keeping time together.

A Cure For Loneliness

BY W. R. ROSE

The air was mild and clear. The children frolicked merrily among the trees in the park. The white capped nurses sat on the rustic seats here and there and watched their charges or played with the smaller children who nestled in wicker carriages with gay colored canopies.

On one of the benches not far from the entrance sat an elderly man. He was straight and square shouldered, with a white mustache and grizzled hair and a strong suggestion of early military training. He sat there because he liked to see the children at play. They were better company than his thoughts. Anyway, he had little else to do.

On this particular day he had watched the playful elves as they darted in and out among the trees until he had grown tired. The warm sun made him sleepy. His gray head slowly dropped back, his shoulders found a restful corner of the high backed seat, and presently he was soundly sleeping.

A slight concussion awakened him. He opened his eyes with a little start. The sun was peeping through the foliage, and the rays dazzled him. He tried to raise a hand to draw his soft hat over his eyes and could not. Both hands were pinned fast. He looked down. A rope was encircling his body and holding his arms fast to his sides. He made an effort to release himself, but without success. He fancied he could sympathize with the feelings of Gull when he heard the pygmies had caught and bound him. He thought of the many times he had watched so many times among the trees. He was right. A child's laughter broke on his ears. His cap was close behind him. "Aha," he said in what was intended for a very gruff voice, "are you there? Unhand me at once or tremble for the consequences!"

The cord—it was a child's skipping rope—was rapidly drawn from about his waist, and he must have later its owner danced in front of him.
She was a little girl of possibly 7, though at times her varying expressions made her seem much older. Her hair floated about her head in careless waves and tendrils, her eyes were gray and deep, her mouth was small and beautifully shaped, and there was a saucy upward tilt to her short nose.

"Foolish, foolish," she said, with a mocking courtesy, "I ain't a bit afraid of you!"
"And why not?" the old man asked. She was a charming fairy, a natural little coquette, and her every move was full of a subtle grace. "And why are you not afraid of such a gray old mustache as I am?" he asked again as she prouetted before him.

"Because you are my grandfather," she carelessly answered.

"That's what you think," said the old man, and his face darkened.
"What do you mean by that nonsense?" he harshly asked.

"That's nonsense," said the little maiden, "unless grandfathers is nonsense. Anyway, you're my grandfather." And she started to leave him.

"Wait!" he cried. "Come here. What did you mean by saying I am your grandfather? Do you call every old man you see grandfather?"
"No," said the child. "Only you."

He studied her face sharply.

"Come a little closer," he said in coaxing tones. She marched boldly up to him. Her little hand flew up and touched the front of her cap.

"That's the way to salute a soldier," she said, with a merry laugh. "Mamma said you was one."

He caught his breath.

"Perhaps," he slowly said, "you can even tell me my name?"

"Yes, I can," replied the child. "It's easy. Your name is Philip. An now guess what mine is."

"Is it Mary?" he gently asked.

"No," laughed the child. "That's mamma's. Mine is like yours. It's Philippa."

The old man was silent for a moment.

"Is your mother here, child?" he suddenly asked. "Is she lurking about among the trees?"

"Why? Do you mean mamma?" cried the child. "She isn't here. She hasn't time for trees. She's always too busy. Didn't you know she paints? Yes, she paints lovely little pictures. Mamma calls them. They're pictures of people, don't you know, only much prettier. But sometimes people don't pay very quick, an sometimes they think mamma charges too much, an sometimes she doesn't have any pictures to do. Then, you know, it's pretty hard to have the landlady call. I guess you know how that is."

"And where is your father?" and the old man's voice suddenly grew hard.

"He's dead in California," said the child. "He was an actor, you know; a stage actor. I don't remember him very well. I was too little when he went away. I've tried to act, too, but Della, that's the janitor's wife, she says I can't act for shucks."

"Good thing," muttered the old man. "Well, I don't know," said the child. "You see, I wanted to do something to help mamma, an if I can't act I don't know what to do. But I s'pose it's no use. Della said that as a child wonder I was the wust she ever seen, an Della goes out a good deal."

A faint smile crossed the old man's stern features.

"And what made you think that I am your grandfather?" he asked.

"Oh, Mamma told me!" replied the child. "She knows everybody. She's lived out more places. She's Bessie Leighton's nurse now, an just as soon as she saw you sittin here one day she said, 'There's old Colonel Robinson. She knew you 'cause you used to go to the Browns, where she was livin then. An pretty soon she looked at me an said, 'Why, he's your grandfather, ain't he?' An I said I didn't know, an she thought it out an said, 'Yes, he is, 'cause your mamma is his daughter, an she ran away with a play actor, an the old hunk shut his door on her forever.' That's what Mamma said. An when I went home I said to Della, 'My grandfather's sittin over there in the park, an he's the loneliest lookin thing.' An Della says: 'If he's settin in the park, he's either a tramp or a millionaire. If he's a tramp you must keep away from him, but if he's a millionaire you want to rope him in.' An when I looked at you again I saw you didn't look like a tramp, an so I thought I'd take my chances an rope you in, an that's just what I did."

"And your mother knows nothing about my being here?" the old man asked.

"Yes, she does," replied the child. "I told her, an she looked so queer, an her face got red, an she said: 'Philippa, dear, it may not be your grandfather. But anyway you mustn't speak to him unless he speaks to you first.' An I made you speak to me first, didn't I?"

The old man leaned back and looked at the child.

"Philippa," he said slowly, "how would you like to come and live with me? You would have your own beautiful room, and all the playthings you could want, and somebody to wait on you, and a pony to drive, and everything that could make a little girl happy."

"An would mamma come, too?" the child asked.

The old man shook his head.

"I'd like the room," said the child, "an the pony, an all the rest, but I guess I'd be too lonesome without mamma."

"We'd be just two lonesome ones together," said the child. Then she added, "If you knew mamma, you'd see how I like it."

"Perhaps I am beginning to see," said the old man softly.

"I'll tell you what we'll do," cried the child. "You can borrow me. How's that?"

"It sounds well," said the old man. "How much will I have to pay?"

"Oh, it's easy," replied the child. "You just come to our flat an send up your card, an then mamma will whistle down an say, 'Please come up.' Then you go up, an I'm there, an I say, 'Mr. Grandpapa, this is mamma.' Then you bow an say, 'Pleased to know you, an mamma says, 'Where have I seen you before?' an then you say, 'Can I borrow your charmin daughter for the rest of the day? for you've come very early in the mornin, you know, an mamma says, 'Have you any security for the rent—I mean for the child?' an you say, 'Oh, yes; indeed I have,' an then you put up a silver quarter for security an take me, an we go away somewhere an have a splendid time together an get home when it's real dark, an mamma is gettin fidgety. I'd like to see that home of yours an that room an those ponies. We ought to get better acquainted—we ought to, really."

The old man smiled at her enthusiasm. Evidently this was a delightful original child.

"Do you think your mamma would let my portrait?" he asked.

"She'd be real pleased to," said the child. "An I'd get the commission, too, wouldn't I? She told me if I got any orders I'd get the commission. You're my order, ain't you?"

"Yes," said the old man as he slowly arose. "Come, we will go and seek your mother. I must get that picture before I grow any older—and before your mamma's memory quite outgrows the reminiscences of her childhood. Come, Philippa."

And hand in hand they passed down the gravelled walk and through the big gates and presently found themselves in front of the huge apartment house that the lonesome Philippa called home.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Too Hungry to Study.

A certain teacher who had studied a particular bad boy from every conceivable standpoint finally found the cause of his apparent wickedness. He had been especially annoying all day, and at the close of the school the teacher sat down by him and said: "John, what is the trouble, anyway? Why is it you find it so hard to behave in school?"

Poor John, in a burst of confidence, blurted out, "It's cos I'm so derned hungry!"

Then the teacher knew that John's reformation must begin in his stomach.—Exchange.

PUBLISHED EVERY TUESDAY AND FRIDAY
SWIFT CHAMP, EDITOR AND OWNER

Thursday, March 19, 1901.

We are authorized to announce W. F. Talbot as a candidate for Mayor of Paris, subject to the action of the Democratic City Primary, July 31.

Major Gen. Chaffee has been ordered to withdraw from China by the last of April all his force save a legion guard of 100 men. This removes the American army from operation in China.

Three lives sacrificed, nearly a dozen men more or less injured and $150,000 property more or less damage are results of a fierce fire in the Daily Advertiser and Record seven-story granite-front building in newspaper row Boston on Friday night.

Andrew Carnegie, who since retiring from active business, has been able to devote his time to the founding of libraries, made to New York City the largest offer of any on record. If New York will provide the sites and the maintenance, he has promised to give $2,000,000 to establish sixty-five branch libraries in that city.

Mr. Carnegie offered to donate $1,000,000 for a building for a new public library in St. Louis, subject to the maintenance and site conditions.

The Old Rascal.

Joseph Stedman, aged eighty years, of Carrington, Ky., was married one year ago to Miss Matilda Jones, aged sixteen years, of Owen county. The young wife has just presented her husband with twin boys. The boys, the mother and the old man are all doing well.

Admiral Sampson is not to be credited with the courage of his convictions on questions of social character. He did not want his views made public, thus proving himself cowardly. While Admiral Sampson deserves all the commendation that has been heaped upon him let it not be overlooked that the sentiments expressed by Sampson and the sentiments of hundreds of others, not alone in the navy, but in the army and in what its members are pleased to term the "higher social circles."—The Commonwealth.

STORIES OF THE STAGE.

Coming Attractions, Gossip in the Lobby and Boxes.

NOT A WAR PLAY.

"Private John Allen" is not a war play, and neither author nor actor wish it to be classed as such. Mr. Charles B. Hanford, who plays the title role, presents the character of a man sorely tried by enemies and tricksters, but who through self-sacrifice and temporary humiliation lends himself to the task of making others happy and aiding them in reaching the goal of their ambitions. The play is a pleasing and interesting one permeated with a distinct Southern atmosphere, and is staged with care and the most minute attention to details. The first act takes place in front of Col. Nat Stone's livery stable while the second and third acts show the interior of John Allen's home, and the fourth the interior of the Caddo Parish Court House in Louisiana. The time of the play is 1880, and the place Caddo Parish, Louisiana. On the walls of the Court House are portraits of Washington, Lee, Beauregard, Stonewall Jackson, Henry Clay, Thos. Jefferson and other idols of the South. The company is one of the best that Mr. Hanford has ever been assisted by. The play abounds in situations that are intense in their interest and dialogue that is bright, witty and original.

This excellent play come to the Grand to-night, and should be witnessed by every lover of pure and clean dramatic productions. As an actor Mr. Hanford is recognized as being a most successful one. His former association with Edwin Booth, Lawrence Barrett, and other of the old time favorites, has fitted him to assume well the roles of a star. The scenery for this production is elaborate, and is all carried by the company. If the people of Paris really enjoy attending first-class performances they should not miss this attraction.

PERUCHI-BELDENI COMPANY.

About the best 10-30-30 cent show which has been at the Grand this season, was the Peruchi-Beldeni Company, which filled a week's engagement in September last. They have been booked for a return engagement on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week, and will open on Thursday night with the latest Eastern success, "Trevelyan Wells." Mr. Peruchi has the strongest line of specialties of any repertoire company on the road this season. Among them are the Peruchi Trio, acrobatic singing and dancing comedians; Miss Effie Francis, America's child soprano; Miss Bessie Troy, champion lady contortionist; Miss Ruth Gale, the favorite contralto; Mr. Nat Curtis, Saturday Matinee feature, Troy's renowned troupe of trained dogs.

Get your seats at Brooks' Wednesday morning.

—Mr. and Mrs. Robert Howe Miller, nee Miss Gertrude Whaley, who eloped from Millburg, Bourbon county, to Louisville, where they were married Thursday, dine yesterday at the Phoenix Hotel en route home.—Lexington Leader.

Mr. Joseph Jefferson comes to the Lexington Opera House Monday, April 16th, for two performances, matinee and night. He will present at the matinee "Rip Van Winkle," and at night "The Rivals." The railroads will make special rates for this occasion. The sale of seats will open April 11th at 9:30 o'clock a. m., at the opera house. The prices will range from fifty cents to two dollars. Orders for seats sent to Manager Chas. Scott will receive prompt attention.

Mr. J. W. Patterson, night police at Nashville, Tenn., says: "In January I had a very bad cold, my lungs, and had half dozen different cough medicines and prescriptions from two doctors, but grew worse all the time. I finally bought a bottle of Foley's Kidney and Bladder Pills, and after using two-thirds of it, I was entirely cured." Clark & Kenney.

Items of Interest.

Forty miles an hour is the speed maintained by a trolley line running between Nashua, N. H., and Haverhill, Mass. The line will carry passengers, freight and baggage, and probably has the fastest schedule of any similar line in the world.

A natural spring is to be seen bubbling from the top of a trolley pole in Brooklyn, N. Y. The pole is one of the hollow ones, and the water spurts like a regular geyser. It is supposed that its bottom end has tapped an underground spring.

It is reported that water from the Jordan River is being bottled by an American firm and shipped to all parts of the world to be bought by sentimental persons for religious use.

Telephones have been successfully installed on the St. Louis, St. Charles and Western Railroad for the purpose of dispatching the cars. The lines run ten miles out from St. Louis in a westerly direction.

Carpeted street cars in Los Angeles have, it is said, stopped the disgusting habit of spitting in the cars.

The Italian Government has just completed a telephone line over the Alps, making a connection between Rome and Paris. The work in the mountains has been several months under way, and has been done at a cost of $140,000.

The newest virtue of the X-ray is said to be the restoration of hair on bald heads. A paper on this subject was recently read at a meeting of the Vienna Society of Physicians by Kienbock.

The contract was recently awarded for a new elevator in the Washington Monument which is the longest elevator run in the world. The rise is 498 feet, and the new elevator, with a load of thirty-five persons, must make a distance of 100 feet a minute, and thus it will take five minutes to pass from the base of the monument to the top. The total ascent of the Eiffel Tower is greater than this, but the trip is made in four elevators.

2nd dam, Belle Blanche, by The Moor, sire of Beautiful Bells, the dam of 8 in 2:30 list.

3rd dam, Bell View Maid, dam of Center 2:29 1-3, by Idol 177.

4th dam, by Pilot, Jr., sire of dam of Maud S, 2:08 3-4, Jay Eye See 2:10.

WIGGINS is a deep, rich-colored bay horse of perfect conformation and possesses every trait and quality that go to make up an ideal stallion. As a 2-year-old he started in six races and won five straight, without losing a heat and could have taken a mark of 2:15 or better. He is a horse of magnificent style and appearance and has proven himself true to his royal pedigree in every respect. He is a young horse in the stud and thus far has had limited opportunities, but his colts show remarkable speed with pure gait and level head. According to his worth and attainments, he stands to-day at a lower fee than any stallion in Kentucky. Send your best mare to him now if you want a trotter and a future.

QUITE a change has been made in the Patton store on Main street, by the new front which is almost completed. With other improvements it will be one of the prettiest stores in the city. It will be completed when completed by Mrs. L. B. Conway & Co., as a first-class millinery store.

To the ladies who wish to be thoroughly up-to-date in the selection of their Spring millinery is extended a cordial invitation to inspect the magnificent stock of Mrs. Corne Watson in her new store in the Nippert Block, three doors below the Hotel Fordham. There never has before been a stock in Paris so equal to it.

THERE is not in the State of Kentucky a more complete and up-to-date stock of New York and Paris pattern hats than that recently purchased by Mrs. Corne Watson during her trip East. She invites the ladies to call at her new place of business in the Nippert Block, and give them thorough inspection.

MISS MARGARET FALLON, of Chicago, the trimmer engaged by Mrs. Corne Watson, has arrived, and is turning out some beautiful specimens of the millinery art. Do not forget that Mrs. Watson is now located three doors below the Fordham Hotel, in the Nippert Block, and diagonally across from her former location.

Change Of Meeting Nights.

The regular meeting night of Manneke Tribe, No. 65, Order of Red Men, has been changed from Friday to Wednesday, and in the future, commencing to-morrow night, the meetings will be held in the K. of P. lodge rooms over Tucker's store.

Mad Dog In Millersburg.

Considerable excitement was created the other day in Millersburg, by the appearance of a mad dog. Before it could be killed a cow and two fine sows, the property of Mrs. A. McNamara, were bitten, and they had to be killed and their bodies burned. The dog also was finally killed, before it did further damage.

Conflagration In St. Louis.

Fire broke out in the ice house of the Anheuser-Busch Brewing Company, St. Louis, yesterday and spread rapidly. The fire soon spread over five acres of buildings, burning the Missouri Car and Foundry Company and a row of flats. The United States arsenal, containing Quartermaster's stores, and the building of the Bosch Brewing Company were threatened.

New Millinery Store.

Mrs. L. B. Conway & Co. will move into their millinery emporium in the new Patton store on Thursday next. In the meantime they are daily receiving orders for hats, their trimmer, Miss Rogers, having arrived. The regular opening days will be on Wednesday and Thursday, April 24 and 25, and they promise the ladies of Paris and Bourbon a stock of Paris and New York pattern hats such as was never before seen in this city. No lady in Bourbon can afford to miss seeing them. Do not forget the opening dates—April 24 and 25.

Mirage Seen.

About sundown on last Saturday evening, several persons living in the Centerville precinct witnessed a well-defined mirage in the Western sky. It is described by those who saw it as being a perfect representation of a small village; a cornfield was plainly seen, surrounded by an open square, and several buildings were plain enough for their different heights to be seen. It attracted a great deal of attention and the superstitious negroes of the precinct saw in it a warning of the approaching end of the world, and in consequence the services at the colored church on Sunday night was continued far into the night, and the noise made by shouting and lamentation was calculated to scare away even Gabriel himself.

Circuit Court.

CIRCUIT COURT adjourned Friday night until this morning. There was nothing transacted Friday excepted a few civil cases. Since our last issue the following judgments have been returned by the grand jury:

George Henry Allen, for mule stealing. Allen has served two terms in the penitentiary, and is convicted of this charge he will go on for life.

There were four indictments returned against Carrie Kellis and Della Thomas for house breaking.

Prof. Boone injured.

PROF. EDWIN BOONE, of the Boone-Yaki Company, while playing an engagement at Rome, Ga., recently, fell down a flight of steps and broke a rib, necessitating him cancelling several dates. He had previously been playing to packed houses throughout the South.

Gus Strans of Lexington yesterday sold his great 2-year-old Hanover filly, dam Aquila, to John E. Madden. The price is private.

Matrimonial.

The engagement of Miss Elizabeth Buckner Woodford and Mr. William Evald Wornall is announced, the wedding to take place in the early April. Miss Woodford is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin F. Woodford and one of Bourbon's fairest daughters. She is a petite blonde, very vivacious and with a true, happy disposition, has won the true admiration of a host of friends, at home and abroad. Mr. Wornall is one of our most popular young farmers and a favorite in society.

The wedding of Miss Marie Louise Parrish and Mr. Jay Johnson Andrews, of Brooklyn will take place the 17th of April. Miss Parrish is the talented daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Parrish, of this city.

The wedding of Miss Annie Bain, daughter of Mr. George Bain the great temperance lecturer, and Mr. Calvert Roselle is announced. The wedding to take place the third of April.

Serious Loss Of Life.

At Olive, 45 miles from Misonola, Mont., Saturday morning a special car containing Ed Davis' "Uncle Tom's Cabin" company was burned, four members of the company losing their lives.

The dead are: Minnie Hearst, aged 28, Mitchell, Ind.; Bert Reid, musician, aged 26, Columbus, Kan.; Leo Tease, musician, aged 24, Kalamazoo, Mich.; and John Bollman, musician, aged 24, Parkersburg, Ia.

The car was attached to a regular east-bound train when it was found to be on fire. Most of the company escaped without injury, but the four mentioned were burned to death in their berths.

This company played in Paris last season.

Attention, Red Men.

The next regular council fire will be kindled to-morrow (Wednesday) night at R. of P. Hall, over G. Tucker's store. Very important business is to be transacted, and a full attendance is requested.

Stock and Crop.

William Penn 3:07 1/2 will arrive in Kentucky next Monday, March 18, and will be taken to Paris where he will be placed in the stud in charge of Douglas Thomas. He is owned by William D. Althouse, Phoenixville, Pa., and will be well received in Kentucky.

Dr. John H. Mallory, Bowling Green, Ky., has decided to go into the business of breeding and raising of Shetland ponies, and has recently purchased a number of mares from parties in Lexington.

W. A. Megibben, the well known New York dealer in fancy harness and saddle horses, has been in Kentucky for several weeks looking after horses of his choice. He has succeeded in purchasing quite a number of road and carriage horses, together with several high-class saddle animals at both public and private sale. He is still here and will remain a while longer.

The Thoroughbred Record gives the following amounts won last year by the get of the sires named:

St. Florian, $35,487.17; imp. Sir Modred, $31,341; imp. Deciever, $33,152; imp. Masetto, $31,661; Hindoo, $29,604; Alark Shook, $17,220; imp. Golden Garter, $24,455.

Mr. Ed Bedford has purchased the Dan Morrisstable on Scott avenue, and will train his horses at Doug Thomas' track.

Henry Clay Rye, the property, of Col. James E. Pepper, won the Crescent City Derby at New Orleans Saturday, at 10 to 1. Colonel Pepper was warmly congratulated upon the victory of the colt.

This is the third son of the same sire to win that event, a unique fact in turf history.

Ossian Edwards sold in Cincinnati Friday four hhds. of tobacco, at $4.50 to $10.75. He also shipped from Carlisle last week ten carloads of walnut logs, six to Cincinnati and four for export.

J. C. Ray has shipped to Lawson, Mo., two carloads of Jacks bought in this county.

BOURBON CIRCUIT COURT.
Joanna Hamilton's Adm., Plaintiff.

Her Heirs, Defendants.

By virtue of a judgment of the Bourbon Circuit Court made and entered in the above styled cause on the 14th day of March, 1901, I will sell publicly at the Court House door in Paris, Ky., on Saturday, March 30,

1901, at about the hour of noon, the following described real estate, to-wit:

The lot of ground with the buildings thereon, situated in the City of Paris, Kentucky, bounded and described as follows: Beginning at a stake in the edge of the Paris & Winchester Turnpike, corner to the parcel formerly owned by Peter Mahoney, and running thence with a line of said lot S 30° 1-2' W 123 feet to an alley (10 feet wide) running through from Pleasant street, along side of the line of Jerry Barker's lot to the Paris & Winchester Turnpike or to their line, thence at right angles to Pleasant street, and with line of said alley S 59° 1-2' E 192 feet and 2 inches to a stake corner to the line of said alley, thence N 80° 1-2' E 116 feet to the margin of said pike; thence with the margin of said pike 105 feet to the beginning; also the right to use said alley in common with the purchasers of lots laid off by E. H. Brand, and is the same property conveyed to said Joanna Hamilton by E. H. Brand and Thomas Green and wife by deed of record in the office of the Clerk of the Bourbon County Court at Deed Book 54, page 308.

The above described property has thereon these dwellings, consisting of two cottages of three rooms each and a two-story frame dwelling of seven rooms. The said property will be offered in three parcels, each parcel containing a dwelling.

The lot next to Conghlin fronts on Tenth street 30 feet and has thereon a one-story house; the middle lot fronts on Tenth street about 45 feet and has thereon a large 2-story house, and the lot adjoining the middle lot and the one nearest the L. & N. depot fronts about 80 feet on Tenth street and has thereon a small two-story house.

After offering said proper in parcels, the undersigned Commissioner will offer said property as a whole and will accept the bid or bids aggregating the most money.

TERMS—Said property will be sold upon a credit of six and twelve months for equal parts of the price; a money, for which the purchaser or purchasers will be required to execute bond with good surety to be approved by the undersigned Master Commissioner and payable to said Commissioner, said bonds to bear interest from date until paid at the rate of six per cent. per annum and having the force and effect of a judgment.

This March 19th, 1901.

Work in the Caisson.
It is the strain within the bowels of the working chamber, unnoticed generally while there; the change on coming into the outer air that the sand hog (the workman) dreads. Under an air pressure the blood is forced away from the extremities. It is driven from the exterior into the central organs, especially toward the brain and the spinal cord.
The man, exhausted by toll under these conditions, climbs a long ladder. He is in the airlock again, with the upper door alone closed. The lock tender jerks up the bottom door. With a twist of the valve he hushes the compressed air out. The ordinary atmosphere rushes in. The upper door is thrown up, and God's sun and air come to the prisoner. The reaction is too severe. The blood, released by the sudden vanishing of 30, 40, 50 pounds of air pressure on each square inch of the body, refuses to act normally. Heart and lungs weaken, vitality ebbs. A sand hog is never sure that the next trip may not be his last.
The practical limit below ground is 50 pounds of air pressure. The men that can work in that atmosphere are masters of their trade. Yet now and then a man is met with who has the strength to go farther.—Cromwell Childs in Leslie's Monthly.

Where the Leak Was.
Once, years ago, when Daniel Webster was secretary of state, there was an important foreign matter up for discussion before the cabinet, and the utmost secrecy was of course maintained, but the whole thing was blazoned about in a few hours after the cabinet meeting. So the president hastily sent for his cabinet to talk over this leak. Each man had a different idea of it.
Finally Mr. Webster arose, saying, "You gentlemen, go on with your discussion, and I'll be back in a minute." In a few minutes he returned and repeated every word that had been spoken in the room in his absence. He explained that if, by standing close to the door outside the cabinet room, you held your ear to it, you could not distinguish one intelligible word; but if, moving back from the door and a little to one side upon a certain spot in the carpet, you kept an attentive ear, every word could be plainly heard as though whispered.
Some enterprising eavesdropper had been experimenting with the door and had found that upon that exact spot there was some acoustic property of the door or room that conveyed the sound in perfect secrecy.—Saturday Evening Post.

A Modern Mother's Diary.
Tonight Clifford has said:
"Mamma, are the stars holes in the sky to let the rain through?"
I cannot sleep, such is my agitation. Clifford is scarcely 5 years old, where as, according to the best pedagogical authorities, Martin Luther did not ask this question until he was 7 and Alexander the Great, in all probability, not until he was 9.
I know not what to think.
One moment I feel assured that Clifford is evincing an unaffected humor, only in the next moment to be overwhelmed by the suspicion that he is bidding for newspaper notoriety merely.—Detroit Journal.
Lopped it off.
Towne—Has he sent you a check for your services?
Brown—Yes, but it isn't for the amount I expected, although I sent him a bill.
Towne—Your writing's bad. Maybe he didn't decipher the amount.
Brown—I'm afraid he did decipher it. I wrote $100 very plainly, and he sent $10.—Philadelphia Press.
The Truth Forced Home.
"I'm afraid," she sighed, "I'm getting old."
"Why?" he asked.
"When I go to the grocery now, the clerks don't nearly break their necks trying to beat one another in getting my orders."—Chicago Times-Herald.

Breaking Up the Mess.
Lasting friendships are formed in the officers' mess abroad ship in our navy, but no effort is made to keep track of a mate when he is transferred. This strikes the landsman as a queer freak of nature, but the sailors accept it as a matter of course never to be questioned. Men get into pretty close communion with each other when they breakfast, dine and sup together for three years. As a rule, they learn each other's history to the minutest detail, unless a man chooses to be disagreeable and distant. Close attachments grow up, yet when the inexorable order arrives from Washington, sending the mess to the four winds of heaven, breaking up, as it were, the family, a warm hand shake ends it all. Each officer goes into a new mess, and the old is forgotten.
It was my good fortune to be introduced to as fine a mess as ever broke bread together on a man-of-war. The devotion of the officers to one another was an inspiration. Finally the separation came. One went to some navy yard, another to the Philippines, another to China, another to Washington, etc. They were scattered all over the world. One day, meeting the lieutenant commander, who had gone up for promotion, I inquired when he had heard from Lieutenant So-and-so.
"Why, not in several months," he replied. "In fact, not since he was ordered to his new station. You know we fellows don't follow each other's movements after a mess is broken up. We form new associations, new friends, and the old drop out of sight. We never think of writing to each other. It is more than likely we shall never see each other again as long as we live, and we haven't the time or inclination to worry over each other's fate."—New York Press.

On the Government.
They were two big, burly Indians. The long eagle feather in the hat of one who is known as "chief" and the bright red ostrich tip in the sombrero of the other would have told that if the unmistakable features had not evidenced it. A government employee, it matters not who, but one who may possibly in certain events happen make a "stake" out of the tribe to which these Indians belong, was doing the honors of the capitol and showing the braves about the corridors. They left the Indian committee room and came to the door of the house restaurant.
"Let's have a bite to eat," suggested the man with the graft.
"All right," was the quick reply of the aborigines.
At the luncheon counter the one who could master the most English asked, "Guv'munt pay?"
"Oh, yes," responded the host, thinking that the quickest way to inform them that they would not have to stand good for the bill.
"Guh'munt pay?" the brave, "we eat lot, guv'munt pay?" And they did four cups of coffee each, half a dozen hard boiled eggs, three ham sandwiches, one dozen doughnuts, a whole baked chicken, ice cream, a whole pie each and besides that a thirst for fire water that was absolutely appalling. The luncheon counter looked as though a cyclone might have paid it a visit by the time the Indians got through, and the bill that the "guv'munt" clerk had to foot made his weary salary look like 7 cents.
"Guv'munt keep good," grunted the brave as he picked his teeth in true "white brother" fashion in the corridor. "We eat here again." But it will not be in company with that particular clerk.—Washington Star.

"How Soon We Are Forgotten."
A writer in a Washington newspaper, in a column devoted to instructive and entertaining chat about the capitol, expresses surprise because in the basement of the building are portraits of "worthy old gentlemen" forgotten by Richard Montgomery, Thomas Mifflin, Charles Thompson and Francis Hopkinson should find a place in the memory of the painter and on the wall of the senate basement.
The writer had looked in Fiske's "History of the United States" and could not find either Thompson or Hopkinson. When he goes to Quebec, he may find the mark to indicate where Montgomery fell while trying to capture the citadel and the house in which he died. At St. Paul's church, New York, he can find his tomb. Mifflin he can find as the president of the congress that resolved on Washington's resignation, and Thompson he will discover to have been regarded as one of the brightest men of the Revolutionary time, while he has but to look at the original Declaration of Independence to see "Fras." Hopkinson's name, one of the best known of all signatures because of the brilliancy and variety of his accomplishments.—New York Times.

A Decisive Step.
His chum came in and found him slinging a lock of hair into an envelope, not furtively or surreptitiously, but just placing it under cover in a calm, businesslike way.
"Hello!" says the visitor. "What's up?"
"Nothing," he answered. "I'm only sending back Miss Hamilton-Highlow's hair, that's all."
"Engagement off again?"
"Yes."
"How many times does this make?"
"Five. It's final this time, though, or away or the other."
"Does she say so?"
"Oh, she always says it's final. I'm deciding things just now. It's off for ever or cards out soon."
"How do you do it?"
"Little scheme of my own. You know the color of her hair, don't you? Warm brown, with a little raw umber in it. Well, this sample of hair I'm doing up is red-gold, regular, standard. I tell you we're going to get down to genuine emotion this time. She'll know whether she loves me or not, and if she does she'll walk me in by the ear."—London Mail.

A Coffee Barometer.
A cup of hot coffee is an unfailing barometer if you allow a lump of sugar to drop to the bottom of the cup and watch the air bubbles arise without disturbing the coffee. If the bubbles collect in the middle, the weather will be fine; if they adhere to the cup, forming a ring, it will either rain or snow; and if the bubbles separate without assuming any fixed position changeable weather may be expected.—Chicago Times-Herald.

Carrie—That awful Tom Browne offered to kiss me.
Bertha—You don't mean it!
Carrie—No, and I told him if he did I'd slap his face.
Bertha—And what did he say to that?
Carrie—He didn't say a word. He just kissed me.
Bertha—And you slapped his face?
Carrie—No; to tell the truth, I was so flustered I forgot all about it.—Boston Transcript.

"There's a whole lot of difference," remarked the freckled fanatic, "in wishing you were dead and wishing you were in heaven."—Indianapolis Sun.

Scrofula

THE OFFSPRING OF HEREDITARY BLOOD TAIN.

Scrofula is but a modified form of Blood Poison and Consumption. The parent who is tainted by either will see in the child the same disease manifesting itself in the form of swollen glands of the neck and throat, catarrh, weak eyes, offensive sores and abscesses and sometimes white swelling—sure signs of Scrofula. There may be no external signs for a long time, for the disease develops slowly. In some cases, but the poison is in the blood and will break out at the first favorable opportunity. S. S. S. cures this wasting, destructive disease by first purifying and building up the blood and stimulating and invigorating the whole system.
J. M. Seal, 115 Public Square, Nashville, Tenn., says: "My daughter fell and cut her forehead. From the wound the glands on the side of her face became swollen and broke. Her mother and I were here and cheerfully attended her without any benefit. We decided to try S. S. S., and a few bottles cured her entirely."
S. S. S. makes new and pure blood to nourish and strengthen the body and is a positive and safe cure for Scrofula. It overcomes all forms of blood poison, whether inherited or acquired, and no remedy so thoroughly and effectively cleanses the blood. If you have any blood trouble, or your child has inherited some blood taint, take S. S. S. and get the blood in good condition and prevent the disease going further damage. Send for our free book and write our physicians about your case. We cheerfully charge whatever for medical advice.

Robert K. Wallis, of Salem, Mo., writes: "I have been troubled with kidney disease for the last five years and have been treated by all the leading physicians and have tried all remedies suggested, without relief. Finally I tried Foley's Kidney Cure and less than two bottles completely cured me and I am sound and well."—Clark & Kenner.

Prof. Livson, of Lonsacopolis, Md., suffered terribly from neuralgia of the stomach and indigestion for thirteen years and after all the doctors failed to cure him they fed him on morphine. A friend advised the use of Kodol Dyspepsia Cure and after taking a few bottles of it he says, "I cured myself entirely. I can't say too much for Kodol Dyspepsia Cure." It digests what you eat. W. T. Books.

LA GRIPPE coughs often continue for months and sometimes lead to fatal results after the patient is supposed to have passed the danger point. Foley's Honey and Tar affords positive protection and security from these coughs.

Look It Seriously.
The late Professor Hinsdale was singularly devoid of all sense of humor, and as for slang—well, he knew far more about the dearest of dead languages than he did concerning these saucy innovations on his native tongue. There was a certain piece of legislation which was of considerable interest to the local school officials. It had been introduced into the legislature and was there hanging fire.

One day Professor Hinsdale, then school superintendent, said to Mr. Tom Whitehead, secretary of the board of education: "Mr. Secretary, what is the outlook for that special school bill now in the hands of the state legislators? Do you believe it will be adopted soon?"

The secretary shook his head in a manner that was not at all to be thoroughly discouraging and said, with a strong emphasis: "It will be a cold day when that bill is passed."

The superintendent nodded and passed on. A day or two later somebody came into his office and asked him about the prospects of the same bill.

"Well," he replied in his heavy way, "I have no personal means of knowing the status of the measure, but I have been assured emphatically by Secretary Whitehead, who may be considered an expert in securing knowledge of this character, that the bill will not pass until next winter."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Public Gallows a Century Ago.
Even if the guillotine had been invented a hundred years ago touring could hardly have become very popular—at all events, for solitary cyclists. The old guidebooks were by no means cheerful reading. A run from London to East Grinstead, a distance of five or six and twenty miles, would have taken the wheelman past three gibbets, and it was just as likely as not that from one or the other of them a body would be swinging in the wind.
Up till the beginning of the nineteenth century the gallows was almost as frequent a landmark as finger posts or public houses have become now. The traveler approaching York is directed by the guidebooks to "turn round by the gallows and three windmills," and the road out of Durham is "between the gallows and Crockhill." Going out of Wells you "cross the brook and pass by the gallows."

Any number of such directions can be gleaned from the old books for the guidance of travelers a hundred years ago, and as these interesting objects were put up and the dead bodies of malefactors left upon them for the special edification of footpads and highwaymen there was a suggestive about them that must have given a special pliancy to cycle touring if it had been in vogue at that time.—London News.

Question of Ethics.
"Be truthful," said the teacher.
"Always?" asked the boy.
"Always," answered the teacher.
"Never tell a lie?"
"Never."
"Not even a white lie?"
"Not even a white lie."
"Huh!" ejaculated the lad scornfully. "It's a mighty good thing for you you ain't a boy with my dad for a father."
"Why?" asked the teacher.
"Because," replied the boy, "if you was my dad a little boy an' you'd heard what he said about Aunt Eliza comin' to visit us w' her children an' Aunt Eliza had asked you if you weren't all glad to see her an' you'd told the truth, like I did, you'd think there was a place where your trousers was mighty thin after dat got through with you!"
He went back to his desk, and as he sat down with great care there was an expression on his face that showed the great lesson of truth had been, at least in a measure, lost on him. And in his indignation and innocence he did not appreciate the humor associated with the fact that his teacher did not belong to that division of the human race that wears trousers.—Chicago Post.
